Solar Gard window safety film for London building

A Solar Gard product story

Edited by the Buildingtalk editorial team Oct 23, 2009

Solar Gard has provided a safety window film to prevent glass form shattering in the event of a terrorist attack.

Number 1 Poultry, a distinctive building in London's financial district, faced an above average risk of collateral damage from terrorist attacks.

If a bomb exploded half a kilometre away, subsequent shockwaves could still shatter windows and send shards of glass flying through the building.

The decision was taken to replace the existing window film with Solar Gard Armorcoat 7 mil Clear Safety Film, to protect the building's occupants as well as passing pedestrians.

Armorcoat safety film offers protection by keeping shards of glass together after being shattered by a bomb blast.

Richard Wrathmall, facilities manager at the building, added: "We have eliminated the risk of flying glass without interrupting our customers, the building occupants, and have done so without any change to the appearance of the building".
